SAMANTHA PRINCE JOINS RESIDENT FACULTY

January 19, 2016 — Samantha J. Prince recently joined Penn State Dickinson Law's resident faculty as Assistant Professor of Legal Writing and Entrepreneurship. She previously was an adjunct faculty member.

Prince has practiced for over 20 years as a transactional business attorney with the Hershey firm of Hedger & Hedger. She received her bachelor's degree from Muhlenberg College, a J.D. from Widener Commonwealth Law, and an LL.M. from Georgetown University Law Center.

Prince's goal is to impart to her law students practical legal skills so that upon graduation and entering the work force, they are not only academically ready but also practice-ready. To that end, each of the courses she teaches will contain experiential learning elements through real-life examples and interactive projects. Prince believes that while it is important to master the skill of analyzing the law, it is equally important to be able to apply the law.

Prince will teach Agency, Partnerships, and Limited Liability Entities; Business Planning for Small Business Enterprises; Operational Issues for Small Business Enterprises; and Problem Solving II: The Lawyer as Writer.
