

17th Annual Lutie A. Lytle Black Women Law Faculty Workshop and Writing Retreat
Works-In-Progress Schedule: Commentator & Room Assignments

An intensive paper (Int.) is a complete essay or article (with footnotes). A reader for an intensive paper session is expected to have read and made red-lined type-written comments (and/or have written a memo) about the substance, grammar, and structure of the document. A reader should also suggest sources if necessary and/or ways to improve the abstract and introduction of the paper.

A work-in-progress (WIP) is a paper draft ranging from 15-40+ pages (with footnotes). A draft paper or part of a draft paper is needed for a work-in-progress. A commentator for a WIP is expected to have read and made detailed written comments about the substance, grammar, and structure of the document.

An incubator (Inc.) is an idea for an essay or article, and the length of this document is typically 1-5 pages (with or without footnotes). An incubator session is a half-baked idea session, designed for receiving feedback on a paper idea. A commentator for an incubator is expected to have read the document and should give comments and suggestions about the idea and its viability as a larger project.

Intensives

For Intensives
75 minutes total for an Intensive paper session.
Intensive presenters may allot their 75 minutes as they see fit, according to their needs. The only caveat is that both commentators receive equal time to comment before opening things up to the larger group. For instance, if Commentator A gets 15 minutes, then so does Commentator B.

Typical Format: 10 minutes for the presenter, 15 minutes for each commentator, and the remainder of the time for other attendees. Most Intensive presenters want as much time for feedback as possible.
Please ensure that you tell the attendees in the room the time allotments you have decided at the start of the presentation, so whoever has volunteered to be the timekeeper will know.

For WIPS and Incubators:

35-minute sessions, with a 5-minute break between sessions.

Format: 8-10 minutes for the presenter, 5 minutes for the commentator, 13-15 minutes for audience feedback, and 2 minutes for the presenter to respond.
